Future Titles

OWC Press next project is a uniform system of citation for tribal legal materials.

We also plan to eventually offer our titles in electronic as well as paper format.

OWC Press hopes to build its list of titles by continuing to contract with tribal courts and tribal governments to publish a wide variety of legal materials.

About OWC Press

OWC Press exists to publish and distribute tribal legal materials. State and federal legal materials, most particularly statutes and court decisions, are readily available in law libraries, in legal research databases, and on the internet.

Tribal legal materials, however, are not as easily located. Even when they are available, tribal materials are often not comprehensively indexed. OWC Press exists to remedy that problem.

OWC Press has developed an index and digesting system that is comprehensive and tailored to tribal materials.

OWC Press is owned by Melissa Tatum, a law professor specializing in Indian law, particularly tribal courts. She has served as a judge for the Southwest Intertribal Court of Appeals and has written extensively on the power and authority of tribal courts.

Services

We are available to consult with tribal governments and tribal courts about organizing, publishing and distributing tribal legal materials, including

- tribal codes
- tribal court decisions
- attorney general opinions
- other tribal legal materials

Our services range from consulting to licensing the index system to compiling, publishing and distributing the final product.

Our fees depend on the services requested, the quantity of material involved, and whether the materials are already in a useable electronic format. We are happy to speak with you about your needs and to provide a free quotation.
